She stretches, gapes, unglues her eyes,
And asks if it be time to rise. Swift.

To UNCO'D. v. a. To divest of divinity.
Were we wak'ned by this tyranny,
T' ungod this child again, it could not be
I should love her, who loves not me. Donne.

Thus men ungodded may to places rise,
And fests may be prefer'd without disguise. Dryden.
UNGO'DILY. adv. Impiously; wickedly.

'Tis but an ill essay of that godly fear, to use that very gospel so irreverently and ungodly. Government of the Tongue.
UNGO'DLINESS. n. f. Impiety; wickedness; neglect of God.

How grossly do many of us contradict the plain precepts of the gospel by our ungodliness and worldly lusts? Tillotson.
UNGO'DLY. adj.

1. Wicked; negligent of God and his laws.
His just, avenging ire,
Had driven out th' ungodly from his sight,
And the habitations of the just. Milton's Par. Lost.

The finner here intended is the ungodly finner: he who forgets or defies his God. Rogers.

2. Polluted by wickedness.
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out in peace. Shakespeare.

UNGO'RD. adj. Unwounded; unhurt.
I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation;
'Till by some elder masters of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungor'd. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

UNGO'RGED. adj. Not filled; not fated.
The hell-hounds, as ungorged with flesh and blood,
Pursue their prey. Dryden.

His glory in the bud. Waller.

UNGRA'CEFUL. adj. Wanting elegance; wanting beauty.
Raphael answer'd heav'n,
Nor are thy lips ungraceful, fire of men. Milton.

A solicitous watchfulness about one's behaviour, instead of being mended, it will be constrained, uneasy, and ungraceful. Locke.

He enjoyed the greatest strength of good sense, and the most exquisite taste of politeness. Without the first learning is but an inconvincible; and without the last is ungraceful. Addison.

UNGRA'CEFULNESS. n. f. Inelegance; awkwardness.
To attempt the putting another genius upon him, will be labour in vain; and what is so plaitered on, will have always hanging to it the ungracefulness of constraint. Locke.

UNGRA'CIOUS. adj.
1. Wicked; odious; hateful.
He, catching hold of her ungracious tongue,
Thereon an iron lock did fasten firm and strong. Spenser.

I'll in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke. Shakespeare. K. Lear.

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Shew me the steep and thorny way to heav'n;
Whilft he, a put and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rede. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

To the gods alone
Our future offspring, and our wives are known;
Th' audacious trumpet, and ungracious son. Dryden.

1. Making no returns, or making ill returns for kindness.
No person is remarkably ungrateful, who was not also insufferably proud. South.

2. Making no returns for culture.
Most when driv'n by winds, the flaming storm
Of the long files destroys the beautiful form;
Nor will the wither'd stock be green again;
But the wild olive shoots, and shades th' ungrateful plain. Dryden.

3. Unpleasing; unacceptable.
It cannot be ungrateful, or without some pleasure to posterity, to see the most exact relation of an action so full of danger. Clarendon.

What is in itself harsh and ungrateful, must make harsh and ungrateful impressions upon us. Atterbury.
UNGRA'TEFULLY. adv.

1. With ingratitude.
When call'd to distant war,
His vanquish'd heart remain'd a victim here:
Orian's eyes that glorious conquest made;
Nor was his love ungratefully repaid. Glanville.

We often receive the benefit of our prayers, when yet we ungratefully charge heaven with denying our petitions. Waller.

2. Unacceptably; unpleasing.
UNGRA'TEFULNESS. n. f.

1. Ingratitude; ill return for good.

The throne of God unguarded, and his side
Abandon'd. Milton's Par. Lost. b. vi. l. 133.

All through th' unguarded gates with joy resort;
To see the slighted camp, the vacant port. Denham.

No door there was th' unguarded house to keep,
On creaking hinges turn'd, to break his sleep. Dryden.

2. Careless; negligent.
All the evils that proceed from an untied tongue, and an unguarded, unlimited will, we put upon the accounts of drunkenness. Taylor.

The spy, which does this treasure keep,
Does she ne'er say her pray'rs, nor sleep?
Or have not gold and flattery pow'r,
To purchase one unguarded hour? Prior.

With an unguarded look the now devour'd
My nearer face; and now recall'd her eye,
And heav'd, and thro' to hide a sudden sigh. Prior.

It was intended only to divert a few young ladies, of good sense and good humour enough to laugh not only at their sex's little unguarded follies, but at their own. Pope.

Are we not encompass'd by multitudes, who watch every careless word, every unguarded action of our lives? Rogers.
UNGU'RD. adj. Not directed; not regulated.

The blood weeps from my heart, when I do shape,
In forms imaginary, th' unguided days,
And rotten times that you shall look upon,
When I am sleeping with my ancellors. Shakespeare.

Can unguided matter keep itself to such exact conformities, as not in the least spot to vary from the species? Glanville.
They resolve all into the accidental, unguided motions of blind matter. Locke.

Nature, void of choice,
Does by unguided motion things produce,
Regardless of their order. Blackmore on the Creation.

UNGU'EST. n. f. [unquiescent, Lat.] Ointment.

Though the course of the sun be curbed between the tropicks, yet are not those parts directly subject to his perpendicular beams, unhabitable, or extremely hot. Ray.

UNHACKED. adj. Not cut; not hewn; not notched with cuts.
With a blessed, and unvex'd retire,
With unhack'd swords, and helmets all unbruise'd,
We will bear home that lully blood again. Shakespeare.

Part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our targe undinted. Shakespeare. Ant. and Cleopatra.

To UNHALL'OW. v. a. To deprive of holiness; to profane; to deificate.
Perhaps the fact
Is not so heinous now, forfeasted fruit;
Profan'd first by the serpent; by him first
Made common, and unhallow'd, ere our taste. Milton.

The vanity unhallows the virtue. L'Estrange.
This one use left such an indelible sacredness upon them, that the impiety of the design could be no sufficient reason to unhallow and degrade them to common use. South.

UNHALL'OWED. adj. Unholy; profane.
Thy curish spirit
Govern'd a wolf, who hang'd for human slaughter:
Ev'n from the gallows did his fell soul fleet;
And while thou lay'st in thy unhallow'd dam
Inus'd itself in thee. Shakespeare. Merchant of Venice.

I had not unlock'd my lips
In this unhallow'd air, but that this jugler
Would think to charm my judgment, as mine eyes,
Obtruding false rules, prank'd in reason's garb. Milton.

Nor shall presume to violate these bands,
Or touch thy person with unhallow'd hands. Dryden.
Here cease thy flight, nor with unhallow'd lays
Touch the fair fame of Albion's golden days. Pope.
